Often

I set the landscape behind bars

I think it. The end gone now.
The road passion over all.

People imposturing; knowing they should be more

Voices grow.

Consider the silence that is always below.

Consider the dead man who left his body
in a closet

Consider, later, the nightmare of love That comes forth, slowly, as a dawn.

We tasted the meaning of houses: Cherries, Enemies, Stones, Children.

And drank honey-milk flow-down streets from lover's hips: Supermarkets, lawns, ladders.

O

sick dring
a plastic code and the perfume of crackhead matrix cornbeef jumps stinking over her high birthday skin hernia leashed to altar-stains a muse calls to its peers:

om orb, home market bone, a guest, thrown out, pacing chronos who sells a ringing thin statue, bare-legged resilient heart thicket filled when alone believing knows nothing

There's something disinterest did with them that was done without regret.

It ran by, pulled blue and mercurial; its damp legs were time, shellaced with the blood from star snow grappling on its missing how endlessly this coldhopper acetylene touchedschreik was the grave's jolly volcanic step anthracite music dribbling from the knick billboard banks

I Die Within You

Scrolling along a coal-oil beach, Where power's half-forgotten Crotchless corn bright cosmopolitan underwar Embalms icebergs

And savagery with its bad necrotic breath Huddling within the tide holds the moment's megaphone
